

The Sea Glass Hunt

It was a beautiful summer day. The perfect day for a trip to the beach. My parents took me to our favorite neighborhood spot, Will Rogers beach. I have a creative side and love spending time collecting sea glass. Luckily, my dad is very patient and took me for a long walk to hunt for sea glass. We walked all the way from Lifeguard stand 15 to Lifeguard stand 20 looking for the precious colored glass. We were gone for about an hour and a half. I know my mom was worried, but we came back with the treasures, so it was worth it.

I looked beneath the pebbles, under seaweed and between the thrust of waves. The glass was not easy to find. I even dug thru the sand and disrupted some sand crabs during the hunt. Each piece was another rare jewel. The green pieces looked like emeralds, the blue ones resembled aquamarine, the red glass was the color of rubies and the milky white shone like moonstone. By the end of the hunt, I collected twenty pieces of sea glass. I felt very proud of myself.

When I got home, I put it in my mom's real jewelry boxes and displayed it in my room. Each color was placed in a different box. The rarest was amber-colored glass. I only have one of those. I also have 7 green, 6 blue, 3 red and 3 whites. I take them out often and remember the special summer day with my dad.
